A Mixed Methods Evaluation of a Tool Assessing Adult Learning Theory Content in EHR Training William Jeffrey Beach 2013 Sophisticated Electronic Health Record (EHR) applications, such as Computerized Physician Order Entry, (CPOE) are being rapidly implemented in a variety of clinical settings. While there is a lack of published research to guide the design, execution and evaluation of strategies for the teaching and learning of EHRs, researchers have identified training gaps as a potential cause of EHR implementation problems. The significance of this research stems from the unprecedented numbers of physicians, nurses, and other clinicians engaged in training for Electronics Health Records. This explosion in EHR training is due in large part to Medicare and Medicaid EHR Incentive Programs established through the Recovery Act/HITECH Act of 2009. With incentive payments tied to the "Meaningful Use" of EHRs rather than simply to their implementation, a focus on effective and efficient training has come to the forefront. Adult Learning Theory (ALT) is well established in the literature as an important framework in the education and training of adult populations. Research into the design and delivery of EHR training programs in the context of clinicians as adult learners is needed. The study will use a scoring tool previously developed and validated to assess documents for evidence of ALT principles in the design and delivery of Continuing Medical Education (CME) programs, Reporting of Adult Learning Principles (RALP). The study design is a formative evaluation using mixed methods to assess the feasibility of the RALP tool to assess the presence of ALT principles in hospitals' CPOE training programs. The addition of a tool that evaluates EHR Training Programs based on their content, rather than perception surveys, will expand future researchers' abilities to evaluate EHR training programs, and explore the relationship between the inclusion of ALT principles and training outcomes. The study finds the RALP to a reliable instrument for the evaluation of ALT principles in EHR training program content. The study identifies future research opportunities for the use and adaptation of the RALP instrument. Finally, the study also identifies potential for the research to be useful in related fields of study, such as instructional design and workforce development.

On the Road to Meaningful Use of EHRs 2012 Although use of electronic health records (EHRs) can improve care coordination and quality, patient safety, outcomes reporting, and provider efficiency, some physicians have been slow to adopt the technology. To encourage the "meaningful use" of EHRs, the federal government created an incentive program for health providers, administered through Medicaid. The Health Information Technology for Economic and Clinical Health (HITECH) Act authorized the federal funding of this program. This report summarizes a survey of California physicians about their current use of EHRs and their eligibility for the Medi-Cal EHR incentive program.

Capturing Social and Behavioral Domains in Electronic Health Records Committee on the Recommended Social and Behavioral Domains and Measures for Electronic Health Records 2014-06-23 Substantial empirical evidence of the contribution of social and behavioral factors to functional status and the onset and progression of disease has accumulated over the past few decades. Electronic health records (EHRs) provide crucial information to providers treating individual patients, to health systems, including public health officials, about the health of populations, and to researchers about the determinants of health and the effectiveness of treatment. Inclusion of social and behavioral health domains in EHRs is vital to all three uses. The Health Information Technology for Economic and Clinical Health Act and the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act place new importance on the widespread adoption and meaningful use of EHRs. "Meaningful use" in a health information technology context refers to the use of EHRs and related technology within a health care organization to achieve specified objectives. Achieving meaningful use also helps determine whether an organization can receive payments from the Medicare EHR Incentive Program or the Medicaid EHR Incentive Program. "Capturing Social and Behavioral Domains in Electronic Health Records" is the first phase of a two-phase study to identify domains and measures that capture the social determinants of health to inform the development of recommendations for meaningful use of EHRs. This report identifies specific domains to be considered by the Office of the National Coordinator, specifies criteria that should be used in deciding which domains should be included, identifies core social and behavioral domains to be included in all EHRs, and identifies any domains that should be included for specific populations or settings defined by age, socioeconomic status, race/ethnicity, disease, or other characteristics.

What buyers are saying: I highly recommend this for medical practices trying to qualify for meaningful use this and upcoming years. - Stuart Zeilender "5 out of 5 stars, this book is well researched, insightful and full of useful information. It distills a difficult subject into plain English. It is clear that the author is well versed in the subject matter. I recommend this book highly." - Marla Durben Hirsch ...I also love a later section where Jim Tate provides some practical strategy advice on how a clinic should approach meaningful use. I know I'll be keeping my copy of The Incentive Roadmap(r) close by as a reference. It's a lot easier to go through than the HHS/CMS/ONC websites. - John Lynn, EHR blogger, emrandhipaa.com Written by Jim Tate, a nationally recognized expert on the CMS EHR Incentive Program, certified technology and Meaningful Use objectives, The Incentive Roadmap(r) is currently in use by practices around the country as the "go-to" manual on achieving meaningful use. Electronic Health Records Carole Medina 2015 The Health Information Technology for Economic and Clinical Health (HITECH) Act established Electronic Health Record (EHR) programs. These programs provide incentive payments for -- and later are expected to apply penalties to -- certain providers, such as hospitals and professionals, to encourage them to demonstrate meaningful use of certified EHR technology and meet other program requirements. Based on the number of providers awarded incentive payments, participation in the Department of Health and Human Services' (HHS) Medicare and Medicaid Electronic Health Record programs increased substantially from their first year in 2011 to 2012. This book assesses the extent of current and expected participation in the EHR programs; examines information reported by providers and others to measure meaningful use in the EHR programs; evaluates HHS efforts to ensure that EHR data can be reliably used to measure quality of care; and evaluates HHS efforts to assess the effect of the EHR programs on program goals related to adoption and meaningful use of EHRs and improved outcomes.

Capturing Social and Behavioral Domains and Measures in Electronic Health Records Institute of Medicine 2015-01-08 Determinants of health - like physical activity levels and living conditions - have traditionally been the concern of public health and have not been linked closely to clinical practice. However, if standardized social and behavioral data can be incorporated into patient electronic health records (EHRs), those data can provide crucial information about factors that influence health and the effectiveness of treatment. Such information is useful for diagnosis, treatment choices, policy, health care system design, and innovations to improve health outcomes and reduce health care costs. Capturing Social and Behavioral Domains and Measures in Electronic Health Records: Phase 2 identifies domains and measures that capture the social determinants of health to inform the development of recommendations for the meaningful use of EHRs. This report is the second part of a two-part study. The Phase 1 report identified 17 domains for inclusion in EHRs. This report pinpoints 12 measures related to 11 of the initial domains and considers the implications of incorporating them into all EHRs. This book includes three chapters from the Phase 1 report in addition to the new Phase 2 material. Standardized use of EHRs that include social and behavioral domains could provide better patient care, improve population health, and enable more informative research. The recommendations of Capturing Social and Behavioral Domains and Measures in Electronic Health Records: Phase 2 will provide valuable information on which to base problem identification, clinical diagnoses, patient treatment, outcomes assessment, and population health measurement.
