Science and Civilisation in China: Volume 3, Mathematics and the Sciences of the Heavens and the Earth Joseph Needham 1959 After two volumes mainly introductory, Dr Needham now embarks upon his systematic study of the development of the natural sciences in China. The Sciences of the Earth follow: geography and cartography, geology, seismology and mineralogy. Dr Needham distinguishes parallel traditions of scientific cartography and religious cosmography in East and West, discussing orbocentric wheel-maps, the origins of the rectangular grid system, sailing charts and relief maps, Chinese survey methods, and the impact of Renaissance cartography on the East. Finally-and here Dr Needham's work has no Western predecessors-there are full accounts of the Chinese contribution to geology and mineralogy.

Ancient Mathematical Astronomy Notable Observations and Calculations Tropical Year: Estimated at 365.2421756 days, which is remarkably close to modern scientific measurements. Sine Tables: Contains one of the world's earliest known tables for the sine function, calculated for every 3.75 degree of arc. Planetary Motion: Describes the eastward motion of planets and provides orbital parameters based on the number of revolutions per Mahayuga. Spherical Earth: Describes the Earth as a sphere (Bhu-gol) and discusses gravity long before modern European theories. The wheel of time begins its ancient spin, Where four great ages let the cycle in; A Mahayuga marks this cosmic climb, With 4,320,000 years of earthly time. The Satya Yuga stands in golden light, Four parts of virtue, pure and shining bright; Then Treta follows with a three-part grace, As silver shadows touch the human race. In Dvapara, the balance starts to sway, With only two parts left to lead the way; The copper age gives way to iron's breath, Where Kali Yuga brings its spiritual death. By four-three-two-one ratio, they descend, As truth and years both hasten toward the end; But when the darkness of the fourth is through, The golden morning starts the world anew.
