Evolution Mechanism and Control Method of Engineering

Disasters Under Complex Environment Jianyong Han 2025-03-03 As the result of resource exploitation and underground space development, the engineering disasters appear, including landslides, tunnel collapses, earthquakes, debris flow and urban facility failures, which may lead to substantial economic damages and loss of lives. The engineering challenges from the geotechnical engineering have attracted wide attention. A large number of engineering disasters, like water gushing, sand inrush, seepage damage, gas leakage and gas explosion, are triggered due to the complex environment such as high water or gas stress, seepage effect and fluid-solid interaction. In order to control the engineering disaster, the primary task to be solved is to reveal the engineering disaster initiation and evolution mechanism induced under complex environment.

Interpretation of Fwd Data when Pavement Layers are Not Intact

Y. Richard Kim 1999 When FWD tests are performed on broken or cracked pavements (of which information is crucial in making rehabilitation and overlay decisions), the multi-layered elastic theory-based backcalculation programs assume that the effect of these discontinuities in a cracked layer on deflection basins would be accounted for by the reduction of the elastic modulus for that layer. However, it has been concluded and confirmed by researchers and practitioners that the backcalculation algorithms based on the multi-layered elastic theory produce large variation in the algorithms based on the multi-layered elastic theory produce large variation in the 'effective' moduli of the cracked layers. Studies have also shown that significant errors in the backcalculated pavement moduli can accrue from performing a static analysis of what is inherently a dynamic test. Unfortunately, dynamic analysis usually involves complex calculations and requires significant computation time, thus making it impracticable for routine applications. This study presents a methodology based on deflection basin parameters.
